Battlemaps

To print out the battlemaps at the correct size, just select 'Poster' in the Adobe Acrobat print dialog box, and the files will be tiled properly across multiple pages.

After printing, simply trim away the white space and either tape the pieces together or mount the sheets to posterboard, etc.

If you're printing on regular paper, as opposed to matte photo paper (and with the number of pages required, that's what I do!) then I've often found it's helpful to print in draft mode to avoid putting too much ink on the page to avoid puckering and warping the paper. (And it saves ink.) Usually the quality is still acceptable for maps that will only be used a couple of times... and compared to dry-erase scribbles, they still look awesome.)
